

Graduate School of Languages and Cultures

Graduate Program in Comparative Studies of Language and Culture

Courses for Spring Semester 2018

This semester, the following courses will be offered.

(A) Language and Linguistics Courses

Linguistic Typology and the Japanese Language (Horie, Thursday 4, IRB 624)

Japanese Psycholinguistics (Tamaoka, Tuesday 6, NW 107)

A Comparative Approach to Media Discourse II (Haig, Friday 3, NW 211)

(B) Culture and Society Courses

Critical Theory (Matsushita, Wednesday 2, NW 207)

Cultural and Intellectual History of Japan II (McGee, Monday 2, NW 105)

Word and Image in Japanese Narrative II (McGee, Monday 5, NW 105)

A Comparative Approach to Media Discourse II (Haig, Friday 3, NW 211)

(C) Common Compulsory Courses

Thesis Writing II (Ivanchenko, Tuesday 5, IRB 609)

Notes

1. Classrooms

IRB = Integrated Research Building for Humanities and Social Sciences (文系総合館)

NW = North Wing, Liberal Arts and Sciences Main Building (全学教育棟本館北棟)

2. Courses Descriptions

All of the courses to be offered this semester will be held as merged courses with the respective instructors' Graduate School of Humanities G30 Linguistics and Cultural Studies (LCS) Program courses. Therefore, for the course descriptions, please refer to the syllabus for that program. This is available at the following URL: <https://syllabus.lit.nagoya-u.ac.jp/curriculum3>. You can find all of the LCS Program courses by typing "LCS" into the Major (専攻) field and then pressing the 検索 (Search) button. Unfortunately, the list of courses only shows their titles in Japanese. However, you can identify them from the name of the instructor, the day and period, all of which are displayed in English. Furthermore, the English title for each course is displayed on the individual course description pages.

3. Compulsory Course

Thesis Writing II is a compulsory course for all CSLC program students. Any CSLC students who have not yet taken and obtained credits for this course should take this course during this semester.

4. Courses for the Fall Semester

Details of the courses to be offered in the Fall Semester will be made available in September.